KILL OLD SCHOOL

The old Kill Parish school, situated at the corner of the street beside St Brigid's church, still stands. It was built in the early 19th century and was extensively restored, for alternative use, in the 1980s with the installation of heating and other modern conveniences.

It has seen many uses in its two centuries, from school house to scout den, bowling alley, changing room for musical shows and pantomimes and, ironically, it is now in use once again as a school class room to cater from the overflow from the nearby primary school, while a new school is being built.
